Catechism Corner

Is there a basic concept from which all Catholic doctrine is derived? (CCC 1-3)

"God, infinitely perfect and blessed in Himself, in a plan of sheer goodness freely created man to make him share in His own blessed life. For this reason, at every time and in every place, God draws close to man. He calls man to seek Him, to know Him, to love Him with all his strength. He calls together all men, scattered and divided by sin, into the unity of His family, the Church. To accomplish this, when the fullness of time had come, God sent his Son as Redeemer and Savior. In His Son and through Him, He invites men to become, in the Holy Spirit, His adopted children and thus heirs of His blessed life." (CCC 1). God moves toward His creation, constantly calling us to respond in kind and grow into deeper unity with Him. Every move He makes demands a response from man, either full, active, conscious acceptance of his love, or denial. The first paragraph of the Catechism is what the Church has called the kerygma, or the basic proclamation of the Gospel. The very first apostles took this basic proclamation out into the known world and through their bold witness slowly began the process of converting the world to Christ, accomplishing his Great Commission (Matthew 28:18-20) (CCC 2). Each Confirmed Catholic is called to share this message, the kerygma, in turn with those who seek truth, to bring them to Christ who is the way, the truth and the life (John 14:6) (CCC 3). Essentially, the Church calls each of us to witness Christ to the world both through word and deed, to announce the Good News of our redemption.

Praised be Jesus Christ...now and forever...and in all things!

The world is a training ground. Here we engage in numerous battles, seemingly without end. The battleground is our very self. The kingdom we fight for is eternal. We fight to win freedom from all that seeks to prevent us from living our eternity in union with God, for indeed, we will live forever, and we must decide where our forever will be.

I was reading from the Book of Maccabees at Morning Prayer. It is replete with battles. Judas Maccabeus rallies his people to fight to save their faith, families, and freedom. I'm always inspired by his courage and zeal. It is a compelling read. I pondered the battling for our souls and the consequences of not engaging in the struggle, of entering into sin. We often feel powerless, unaware of how to fight. We know that to sin is our free choice, but how do we prevent it? How do we hold our ground as holy ones of God, as saints, in the face of temptation?

My 'go to' is always to look for a tool. Sometimes, simply running away, as suggested by St Therese, is an easy and respectable solution. At other times, we need to engage. It is the continual engagement that renews our minds, strengthening our resolve. Let us consider 'extreme annoyance at another' as an example of a call to battle. The annoyance enters me and grips, it seems, my entire self. The tremendous energy of it is prompting me toward saying something nasty, arrogant, sarcastic, demeaning. The door to sin is opening...STOP! I do not want this. It is a suffering. Lord, I offer you this suffering. I choose to suffer rather than to sin. I place that annoyance in my hand. It sits there. I feel it. I don't enjoy it. Yet, I am willing to experience it as a gift to my Lord. If we are willing to suffer, the influence of the devil upon our weakness is thwarted, for all he can do is cause suffering in order to lead us astray. I do NOT act on it. I say nothing negative or hurtful; rather I smile.

Being able to feel 'bad' and still choose the good is one of our most powerful tools. It is very lacking in the world. It is essential to learn how to carry both the pain and the joy of life simultaneously. That's how life is. Our ancestors knew that; at least, my parents did, and showed me that it truly is the proper ordering of life. Let us ask the Holy Spirit to inspire in us an understanding of our power against sin as children of the Most Blessed and Almighty God!
